

Nikki Greenberg

Keynote Speaker

Nikki Greenberg is a real estate technology and innovation strategist with a broad professional background working in real estate development spanning two decades. She previously served as Head of Technology Strategy and Digital Management at QIC, an Australian investment manager where she led the digital transformation efforts of the real estate group which encompassed $17Bn AUM, alongside a significant $4Bn development pipeline. Here, in addition to overseeing the rollout of digital strategy initiatives and preparing the strategy's update, a key focus of her effort was on devising a strategic approach to building technology at a portfolio-wide scale through the creation of a series of playbooks and digital masterplans.

She is a former Director at Brown Harris Stevens within the elite new development division of the New York office, and has held various positions at Greenland Group, Koichi Takada Architects, Buchan Group and Lendlease in Sydney, Australia.

Nikki has been the recipient of numerous industry awards and accolades including being recognized as a Top 9 Most Influential PropTech Women (2024), Top 5 Most Influential Women in Real Estate (2022), ULI Global Luminary (2022), Top 25 CRE Innovator (2021), and Finalist at MIPIM Global PropTech Awards (2019). She has been a featured keynote speaker for the real estate industry's leading groups and conferences and frequent commentator in the press.

Proudly serving as both the former co-chair of the Urban Land Institute's New York Real Estate Technology and Innovation Council, and Global Ambassador of Women in PropTech, (which she also founded), Nikki leads the industry's conversation on built world innovation. Nikki is an alumni of UNSW in Sydney, Australia where she attained Masters of International Business, Masters of Architecture, and Bachelors of Architecture with Honors.

An Australian national, today she resides in New York City.
